A black and white photograph of a fingerprint, showing the characteristic ridges and valleys of the skin. The print is oriented vertically and appears to be a latent print on a light-colored surface. The ridges are dark and form a complex, swirling pattern. The valleys are lighter and provide contrast to the ridges. The overall shape of the print is somewhat oval, with the ridges flowing from the top towards the bottom, where they form a more defined, circular pattern. The image is grainy, typical of a forensic photograph.
